Periwinkle Bay

Her starry eyes, like summer skies,
Were soft and oh, so blue!
All cloudless were their azure deeps,
Serene and oh, so true.
The blush upon her cheek was like the Almond flower in May;
Her name was Polly and she dwelt on Periwinkle Bay.

Her smile was bright, her heart was light,
One sunny day of Spring,
For Polly loved a sailor lad
And wore a golden ring.
But ere the moon had waned again
Her lover sailed away,
And sorrow dwelt with Polly there
On Periwinkle Bay.

How oft, alas! it comes to pass,
When sailor lads depart,
They steer for all the ports save one,
Where waits the breaking heart.
But shed no tears for Polly, you'll find her any day
The bride of that same sailor lad on Periwinkle Bay.
