A-dieu for a while to the Town and its trade, A-dieu to the meadow and Rake,

Our Country my Boys calls a-loud for our aid, and ſhall we that Country for-

-fake, and ſhall we ſhall we that Country for-fake, and ſhall we that Country forſake,

2

It never was known, that true hearts like our own,
From hardſhips or hazards wou'd flinch.
Let our foes then unite; we will ſhew them in fight,
What BRITONS can do at a pinch.

3

A ſlave may he be, who will not agree,
To join with his neighbours and ſing.
That the Brave and the Free—ſuch BRITONS are we,
Live but for their Country and King.
