Anton Beer-Walbrunn (1864-1929) was a German composer and teacher. He qualified initially as a schoolteacher following his father's wishes, but on his father's death in 1886 he enrolled in the Munich Academy of Music as a composition pupil of Rheinberger. From 1901 he taught at the Munich Academy where his pupils included Furtwängler and Alfred Einstein the musicologist. He wrote three string quartets of which this quartet in G is the only one to be published. Wilhelm Altmann, writing in Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey says "Beer-Walbrunn is a composer of sterling worth, sincerely devoted to the classical tradition, whose chamber music possesses both interest and charm."
