ARGUMENT.

THE scene of LAKME is laid in one of the large cities of India, and in its immediate vicinity, recently subdued and occupied by the English. The opening takes place in the grounds of NILAKANTHA, a Hindoo priest, whose premises it is considered criminal and worthy of death to profane. A small party of English ladies, and officers of the British army find their way thither while strolling about for amusement. They force an entrance through the bamboo enclosure, and, while admiring the beauties of the place, come upon some beautiful jewels which have been laid aside for the moment by the daughter of the Brahmin proprietor. Realizing the impropriety of their presence, they turn to leave; but GERALD, one of the officers, and the lover of Ellen, daughter of the Governor, wishing to make a sketch of the jewels for the benefit of his lady-love, remains behind for that purpose while the others depart. Upon reflection, he decides to relinquish the idea of copying the form of the jewels, and in the moment of leaving is surprised by the sudden appearance of LAKME, just returning from a little excursion upon the neighboring stream. They are mutually struck by each other's presence, and, seemingly, a case of love at first sight is the result. LAKME demands how and why he came there, and tells him of the death penalty which must follow such intrusion. GERALD expresses his admiration of LAKME'S beauty, and hastily departs, or conceals himself, just as the priest-father returns to his home. NILAKANTHA notices the disturbance of his daughter, and observes the strange footsteps, and declares that the intruder must die, if discovered. In the second act, the scene is changed to the neighboring city, where a grand Brahminic festival and procession take place in honor of the gods and goddesses of India. Also, an Indian bazaar, with its occupations and amusements. Many English residents are present, among them the party of the first act. Also the priest and his daughter, disguised as penitents, NILAKANTHA orders LAKME to sing, believing that she will be heard by the intruder upon his premises, and by his admiration of her beauty and voice will betray himself to his enemy's vengeance. The plan succeeds. GERALD is noted by the pleasure he shows at again meeting with LAKME. NILAKANTHA, convinced of his guilt, sends his daughter away, and consults with his friends upon the manner in which he proposes to take vengeance upon the destroyer of his peace and the intruder upon the sanctity of his home. LAKME, disobeying the commands of her father, remains at hand, and when, shortly afterwards, GERALD is stricken down by the dagger of NILAKANTHA, she comes forward with her faithful slave, HADJI, and orders him to be carried to a hut concealed in the forest, where, his wound found to be not mortal, she cares for him and restores him to life and strength by the juices of certain plants, whose medicinal properties are well known to the Hindoos. There, as he recovers, his passion for her increases, and all else, including his former love, seems forgotten. A chorus of voices is heard passing their retreat, which comes from a procession of young lovers on their way to drink the waters of a sacred fountain, said to have the property of making unions lasting. GERALD wishes to drink of this water. LAKME obtains it, and is about to present it to him, when she perceives that a change has come over him during her absence. Meanwhile FREDERIC has made diligent search for his friend, and at last finds him alone in the hut. He endeavors to recall him to his duties by telling him that his regiment is ordered off at once to suppress an outbreak among the Hindoos. GERALD promises to be at his post in time, but begs a little delay, that he may once more see and bid adieu to LAKME. Upon receiving this promise, FREDERIC leaves him at the moment of LAKME'S return with the sacred water. As she offers it to GERALD the fifes and drums of his regiment, just leaving for the seat of the rebellion, are heard in the distance. The sound, which recalls him to love and duty, transforms him, and he turns away from the proffered draught. LAKME is shocked by the sudden change in him, which she but too well knows how to account for. In her heart-breaking despair, she gathers and eats some flowers of the deadly poisonous datura stramonium, from the effects of which she dies in his arms, just as her father and his friends arrive on the scene.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A well-shaded garden, where flourish and intermingle all the flowers of India. In the background, near a little river, stands a building of modest proportions, half concealed by the trees; a figure of Lotus, over the door, and near by, a statue of Ganesa, an idol with the head of an elephant, the god of wisdom, give this mysterious abode the appearance of a sanctuary. The garden is enclosed by a high fence of bamboo. Time, daybreak.

HADJI, MALLIKA, NILAKANTHA: then Hindoos, men and women. HADJI and MALLIKA come to open the garden gate to the Hindoos, who enter immediately.

SCENE V. GERALD, FREDERIC, ELLEN, ROSE, and MRS. BENSON. (Laughter is heard outside the enclosure.)

ROSE. What do you see?
FRED. I see a garden.
ELLEN. And you, Gerald?
GER. I see some fine trees.
ELLEN. Is any one there?
GER. I don't know.
ROSE. Look carefully.
FRED. That is not so easy, over such a paling.
ELLEN. Try to push aside the bamboos.
MRS. BENSON. Young ladies, young ladies, be prudent!
GER. Stay! I see a statue of Ganesa, god of wisdom.
FRED. I see a lotus drawn above the door; 'tis the abode of a Brahmin!
ROSE and ELLEN. Of a Brahmin?
FRED. Let us go away.
ROSE and ELLEN. What for?
FRED. Because we must not trifle with these people.
ELLEN. (pushing aside the bamboos.) Oh, as for myself, I wish decidedly to see a Brahmin's garden.
MRS. B. Be prudent, Miss Ellen.
ELLEN. Ah! 'tis too late. (The bamboos have yielded, and she enters the garden.)
MRS. B. Oh, Miss Ellen!
ROSE. The breach is made, we can all go through.
MRS. B. You, too, Miss Ellen?
GER. We cannot back out now, O venerable Mrs. Benson!
MRS. B. (entering and making a grimace.) But I don't know upon whose grounds we are trespassing.
FRED. Ah! I know very well, now. I am not personally acquainted with the proprietor of this little temple, but I have heard much said about him.
GER. It is quite certain we have not been presented.
FRED. And thus we place ourselves in a dangerous predicament.
ROSE (quickly). Do not frighten Mrs. Benson!
ELLEN. No, do not alarm her.
MRS. B. With your permission, young ladies, I am your governess, and prudence is a duty with me.
ROSE. Prudence, allowed; but fear?
MRS B. Fear also. When his highness, the governor, deigned to intrust his daughter and niece to my care, he recommended me to be afraid. I engaged myself to be afraid. I am afraid!
ELLEN (to ROSE, gayly). See how pretty it is. What lovely groupings of leaves and flowers!
FRED. Beware of serpents 'neath the flowers, Miss Rose.
ELLEN. How charming is that rivulet, bordered with verdure!
ROSE. It seems to lengthen itself with a graceful turn to reach hither.
ELLEN. See, too, those beautiful flowers—
FRED. Do not touch them, Miss Ellen. They are daturas (datura stramonium); harmless enough in England, but here, under this brilliant Indian sky, to put a leaf of it in your mouth is sufficient to—
MRS. B. To poison one?
GER. Yes, to poison one!
FRED. Quite so, Mrs. Benson.
MRS. B. It is an abominable country.
FRED. If you will allow me to talk reason with you—
ROSE. We won't allow it.
ELLEN. No, no; we won't allow it any way.
FRED. See, Gerald, you who have rights, or the semblance of certain rights, since you will have the happiness to wed Miss Ellen in a few weeks—
GER. I shall never use my rights in opposition to my wife's.
ELLEN (holding out her hand). All right; that is well said.
FRED. Oh, these lovers! (To GERALD) Adventure, moreover, is not unpleasing to you. (To MISS ELLEN) You do not understand him, Miss Ellen; he loves danger, and finds poetry therein. He is a dreamer of the impossible,—an enthusiast of the unknown; he loses himself with love in the blue ether!
ELLEN, (hastily.) I do not reproach him for that.
FRED. (Gaily.) Quite the contrary, is it not so? I am the prosaic one; I swear to you, however, that if I were alone—
ROSE. What! we do not greatly expose ourselves, since we meet no one. That dwelling seems un-inhabited.
FRED. I again assure you that is really inhabited, by a Brahmin fanatic, named Nilakantha. He ministered at a pagoda that the conquest ruined, which he with difficulty pardons us.
MRS. B. But I see plenty more pagodas.
FRED. In the cities— yes. We shall have, too, tomorrow, one of the greatest of Hindoo festivals. All the Brahmin's of the neighborhood will meet in the grand pagoda. But in the villages the faith is slowly dying out. Nilakantha has retired to this little corner of land, which he has consecrated to Brahma by his own authority, and he lives upon the modest offerings of some faithful Hindoos. He has a daughter—
ELLEN. A daughter?
MRS. B. Do such people have daughters?
FRED. She is named Lakmé.
ELLEN. Oh, what a pretty name! Lakmé!
ROSE. I should like to see her.
FRED. She is all that is wanting here. But you do not see, Europeans as you are, that this little person, born in a pagoda, vowed to some god or goddess of the Indian Heaven, believes herself a part of the divine essence. She despises all that passes outside this enclosure, and never shows herself abroad.
ELLEN. Is she beautiful?
FRED. Ravishingly so, they say.

ROSE. (Perceiving the jewels on the table.) Stay! A woman's jewels?
ELLEN. The Brahmin's daughter's.
ROSE. How graceful they are in form!
FRED. (Quickly.) Young ladies, do not touch them.
ELLEN. Be re-assured; I shall not touch them, as they are sacred. But Gerald might copy the design.
FRED. Would you install him here with his pencils?
GER. Why not?
FRED. How— why not! We have not only committed here a violation of home, condemnable in all countries, but a veritable sacrilege, the dwelling of a Bramin being sacred as the pagoda itself. Thus, a sacrilege committed by a European, never goes unpunished. The guilty one falls someday or other, struck by an invisible hand!
MRS. B. Ah! great heaven, why did you not tell us that at once!
GER. The officers of her majesty, the Queen of England, scorn the Brahmins
FRED. It is not a question of courage who never show themselves, who pursue their vengeance in darkness, without haste, waiting for the propitious moment, sure that none of their own people will denounce them. Remember, that we are in a conquered country.
MRS. B. Yes, yes, among a barbarous people. When I think how well off we might be in London, at Hyde Park, inhaling the delicious fog that so freshens our complexions! Now, young ladies, I shall make use of my authority.
GER. I propose a transaction. You will go back to the city, respectable Mrs. Benson—
MRS. B. Thank you.
GER. With these young ladies and Frederic. I will stay here, and copy the design of these jewels, which so please Miss Ellen.
ELLEN. (To GER.) If so be you incur no danger.
GER. (Laughing.) Not the least. So soon as I shall see anyone coming, I shall escape, and make no fuss about it.
ELLEN. I will wear the jewels on our wedding day.
GER. Then I shall find them beautiful.
MRS. B. Well, young ladies?—
ROSE. (To ELLEN.) I am sorry to go away.
ELLEN. I am still more sorry.
FRED. (To GERALD.) Remember, that you are in the wrong here—
Mrs. B. Mr. Frederic
FRED. (Going out.) He is a hero. You are a hero, and I am ridiculous, stupidly ridiculous. In this world, that is generally the fate of wise men.
MRS. B. Mr. Frederic— (They go out.)

SCENE IV. ROSE. FREDERIC. MRS. BENSON. Then GERALD and ELLEN.

ROSE. (to FRED.) Here again are that old man and his daughter;
FRED. Take my arm. [they frighten me.
ROSE. Oh! willingly, because I am afraid.
FRED. She is adorable. (Aside.)
ROSE. (To FRED.) Who are they? they are unlike the others.
FRED. He is a mendicant monk, or penitent, who comes to the festival in hopes of finding here some special profits.
ROSE. And the young girl?—
FRED. She will sing ballads, or dramatic scenes, in which the Hindoos take delight.
MRS. B. Ah! there is Miss Ellen! do not let us get separated again, I implore you. (ELLEN enters leaning on GERALD'S arm.)
FRED. Ah! Miss Ellen, it is easy to see that you are proud to take the arm of a hero.
ELLEN. Do not jest. I have been very anxious, and reproached myself for leaving Gerald in the Brahmin's garden.
MRS. B. Was there any danger? GER. None at all.
ROSE. But he has not brought back the designs which were wanted.
FRED. Bah! Truly? ELLEN. He was right.
MRS. B. Did you go back?
GER. The Brahmin's daughter was there gathering flowers.
FRED. Did you see her?
GER. I perceived her. FRED. Ah! ha!
ELLEN. I should have been truly sorry if my curiosity had caused the least trouble to that young girl. You see she interests me now, the little goddess.
FRED. (Aside.) She does not notice that he is quite dreamy, our young friend Gerald. His are state graces.
MRS. B. Young ladies, do not leave me again,
FRED. (Softly to GERALD.) Do you know that we are ordered out
GER. Is that so? [at three o'clock.
FRED. The regiment will be off to-night to fight the rebels.
GER. You must conceal that absolutely from the ladies.
FRED. Just so. (To MRS B.) I advise you, now, Mrs. B., to return with the young ladies to the Governor's palace. There will be no more to see but the ceremony of the pagoda and the the procession of the goddess Dourga; we will call and take you up.
ELLEN. Will you not return with us, Gerald?
GER. Certainly. [min's daughter.]
ELLEN. You have not told me if she was really beautiful, the Brah-
GER. She is peculiar. (Goes out with ELLEN.)
MRS. B. For myself, I am not sorry to go back. Meanwhile there is nothing more of which they can rob me. (Goes out.)
ROSE. (To FRED. stopping as they were about to follow.) Haven't you a review to-day?
FRED. A simple order out.
ROSE. In warlike array?
FRED. Why no! not at all; why in warlike array?
ROSE. You did not mention that your regiment would depart
FRED. The regiment? [to-night.
ROSE. Oh! I know they make a secret of it.
FRED. Whence came your news? [trusted me.
ROSE. From my uncle, the governor's, by chance; they never mis-

SCENE II. FREDERIC, GERALD.

FRED. (appearing suddenly.) He is living!
GER. What! Frederic?
FRED. Yes, 'tis I! I have searched everywhere for you, and without luck. At length I find you! I learned what had happened. I was informed that one of our people had been struck down on the public square by one of the fanatics who organize insurrection againt us through all the provinces, and at once suspected Nilakantha. It was you who were attacked!
GER. Yes!
FRED And on account of the Brahmin's daughter?
GER. Yes, and it was she who saved my life,
FRED. Is she here?
GER. Yes.
FRED. (changing his tone.) Ah! Gerald, do not allow yourself to be further drawn away by a passion which is not the same with these Hindoo maids as with our young English girls. When they only take a fancy that another will soon replace, 'tis charming! But when love has penetrated their hearts, open to every intoxication, it becomes terribly serious! Come! be off with me, at this moment even! We must leave at once!
GER. Without seeing her again?
FRED. Yes, without seeing her.
GER. But just remember I owe my life to her.
FRED. It is a matter of more than love,—it is an affair of honor!
GER. Of honor?
FRED. Yes. The revolt is extending on all sides, and our regiment will leave in one hour.
GER. I will follow it.
FRED. No, no; you will come with me. It is a case, Gerald, which must take its place above all passions, all enticements, and all troubles. It is the honor of a soldier! I do not wish that, at the roll-call of those who march against the enemy, the question shall be asked, Where is Gerald? I do not wish, when the English flag is threatened, that any one should say, Gerald, is not at hand.
GER. One moment—
FRED. No! she will withhold you.
GER. She will not, indeed!—just time to see her. In an hour I shall have rejoined you.
FRED. You swear it?
GER. Yes, I swear it! (After an effort.)
FRED. So be it! but be prudent. The governor has this morning organized a hunting party to conceal the gravity of events. Miss Ellen and Miss Rose were but this moment on the outskirt of the wood.
GER. Miss Ellen?
FRED. I hope they may not have seen me. Ah! heaven, if— they have followed me, hide yourself in this thicket; they must not see you. (GERALD conceals himself.) Thank God, he is saved! But how shall I explain my presence here? Why in the devil's name have I come to conceal myself in this forest? I have been drawn here by my poetic nature? No! that would be too unlikely. I am studying botany. Well, I am not unlike a botanist; I am studying the flowers of India. (looking at a plant.) Datura stramonium,—a terrible poison (plucking a flower.) The sunflower? This must be a sunflower, inoffensive enough. Here they are!—feign to be asleep. I shall have fallen asleep while studying botany!

ROSE. We followed you.
FRED. Ah!
ELLEN. Without a thought of doing so!
ROSE. (to FRED.) Ellen hoped a little that she might find Gerald with you.
FRED. What, here! Gerald? What an idea! Gerald with me! (ELLEN moves towards the thicket where GERALD is concealed.) Please do not go in that direction.
ELLEN. But why not?
FRED. Those thickets are dangerous. I will go and show you the way.
ROSE (moves towards the thicket.) Come, then; let us go.
FRED. Not in that direction, Miss Rose.
ROSE. Ah! why not?
FRED. This way; I will guide you to the outskirt of the forest; and then will rejoin my regiment, which we shall meet in that direction.
ELLEN. Will Gerald be there?
FRED. (so as to be heard by GER.) Certainly he will be there; that is, I think so. Could you imagine to yourself that an English officer would fail in his duty? He will find time before leaving to tell you again how much he loves you. I am sure that just now he thinks only of you.
ROSE (perceiving a veil left by LAKME.) Ah!
FRED. Come, lose no time.
ROSE. You must be vexed with us?
FRED. Not at all.
ROSE. We have troubled you.
FRED. I was only studying the flowers of India.
ROSE (showing the veil.) This, for instance?
FRED. (aside.) Pshaw! That compromises me. (Aloud.) I will explain it all.
ELLEN (eagerly and laughingly.) Oh! no; do not explain.
FRED. I insist upon telling you—
ROSE (throwing down the veil.) Oh! monsieur; no confidences.
FRED. My innocence would surprise you. (to ROSE) Here take my arm, (to ELLEN,) and you my other arm.
ROSE. No, I will walk alone.
ELLEN. I, too.
FRED. Then I shall order a halt. (Aside.) I alone am to blame; and he,— well, he is saved. There is a deity for lovers, who ought to think of me. (Running to ELLEN.) Let me push aside the branches. (They disappear; GERALD also comes out from the thicket and follows them with his eyes, seized with violent emotion.)

SCENE IV.—GERALD, alone; then LAKME.

GER. Twenty times I have just escaped betraying myself. I blushed at concealment, and shame withheld me. (Perceiving LAKME approaching.) Lakme.
LAK. (returns triumphant, bringing the cup of holy water.)
