Roses in Winter

Softly sinking through the snow,
To our winter rest we go,
Underneath the snow to house
Till the birds be in the boughs;
And the boughs with leaves be fair
And the sunshine everywhere.

Softly through the snow we settle,
Little snowdrops press each petal;
Oh, the snow is kind and white,
Soft it is and very light;
Soon we shall be where no light is,
But where sleep is, and where night is,
Till our summer bids us waken.
